Three hurt on 603 as Joiner outlines four-laning.schedule

As members of the Hancock County Chamber of Commerce Board waited Tuesday for Southern District Highway Commissioner Bob Joiner to provide a status report on a proposed four-laning of Hwy. 603, three people were injured in a headon collision on that same road near its junction with I-10.

According to State Trooper Fred Keel who is investigating the accident, the three-vehicle collision occurred about 5:50 p.m. near the entrance to Fore Concrete.

The Chamber meeting was scheduled to begin at 6 p.m.

Keel said two of the vehicles involved were travelling north on 603 and one was travelling south.

A 1983 Chevrolet van driven by Cary Cocke III, 45, of Clarksdale was in front of a 1987 Oldsmobile driven by Lester J. Meng of Long Beach, in the northbound lane.

The vehicle in the southbound lane was a 1977 GMC pick-up truck driven by Leroy Asher Jr., 22, of Rt. 2, Box 874, Bay St. Louis.

Keel said Asher's vehicle crossed over into the northbound lane and Cocke's van swerved to avoid it. The trooper said the van was sideswiped and the pick-up collided head-on with the Oldsmobile.

The trooper stated that Asher was charged with driving on the wrong side of the road, which was listed as the cause of the accident. He also stated that speed was not a factor.

The accident blocked both lanes of the highway for about 90 minutes. Keel said traffic on the south was backed up over the Bayou LaCroix Asher, Meng and a passenger in pont of Houma, La., were injured and were taken to Hancock Medical Center by Mobile Medic Ambulance Service.

Cocke and four children who were passengers in the van were not reported injured.

At the Chamber meeting, two directors said they were late because they got caught in the traffic jam the accident caused.

Perkins, who is also a Chamber director, left the meeting to report to Hancock Medical Center.

Joiner had been asked to provide the chamber with a status report on a proposed four-laning of Hwy. 603 from US-90 to Interstate 10. Chamber Executive Director Olivia Milner said.

The Chamber has publicly declared support for four-laning the road from US-90 to the I-59 interchange near Poplarville.

Joiner also discussed the second phase of the project, which will ex-tend the four-laning to the Highway 43-603 junction.

She also stated that Joiner was not asked to address the board as a candidate for re-election because it is against board policy for candidates to address chamber meetings.

According to Joiner, the State Highway Department has aiready obtained preliminary Coast Guard approval of proposed bridge additions at Bayou LaCroix and is awaiting the U.S. Army Corps of Engineer's advisement on wetlands permits.

A survey team has also been working along the higway, the commissioner said.

According to a June 15 letter Joiner has received from District Engineer Joe R. Davis, advertisements for a public hearing should begin in mid-August if preparations continue on schedule.

Joiner said $50,000 has been obtained for preliminary engineering, with $10,212 already spent as of June

He added that obtaining rights-ofway necessary for addition of two lanes for the first phase has been estimated at $500,000 and that funding is included in the department's three-year funding plan.

Joiner said it is possible that some parts of the highway may be sixlaned rather than four-laned at maior intersections.

He said the department is required to improve road shoulders in order to qualify for project funding. Some acquisition work can probably begin by the end of Fiscal Year 1989, he added. Because the highway department's fiscal year begins in July, that would be about 13 months from now.

Chamber directors also discussed several interim measures, which Joiner said he plans to consider.

The interim measures suggested by board members include restriping the highway, particularly in sections with poor visibility; putting up signs to mark dangerous curves; possibly diverting some of the Hwy. 603 traffic to Hwy. 607 by placing directions to Bay St. Louis on I-10's eastbound lanes at Hwy, 607; and adding acceleration lanes to replace the yield sign at the I-10 interchange.

ACCIDENT SCENE-A GMC pick-up truck and an Oldsmobile await tow trucks Tuesday night after colliding on Hwy. 603. Three people were injured in the wreck, which also involved a Chevrolet van, State Trooper Fred Keel stated. According to Keel, those injured included pick-up truck driver Leroy Asher Jr., of Rt. 2, Bay St. Louis; and two occupants of the car, driver Lester J. Meng of Long Beach and passenger Alice Dupont of Houma, La. (Staff photo by Dena Bisnette).

Supervisors seek to hasten Corps shore protection study

BY DENA BISNETTE

The Hancock County Board of. Supervisors hopes to shorten the projected 1989 completion schedule of a U.S. Army Corps of Engineers shore protection study.

Four board members met Wednesday with Rick Champion, a corps design engineer who specializes in shore protection, to discuss the two-year study...

Champion described to the board three different widths of sand beaches, including 100 feet, 200 feet and 300 feet, and some other shore protection devices.

The board had arranged the meeting last week after a discussion with another Corps representative. Robert Martin.

Martin had indicated that the study is somewhat behind schedule and will not be finished until March

Hancock County orignally committed $77,000 to the first year of the study and agreed to consider another $66,000 for the coming fiscal year with the intentions of using the result to obtain up to $12 million in federal grant funds.

The four supervisors, including Bert Courrege of Beat One, A.A. Kellar of Beat Two, Roger Dale Ladner of Beat Three and Sam Perniciaro of Beat Four, agreed with Champion that 300 feet of beach would probably be most economically feasible to maintain over a longer period of time.

The fifth board member, Beat Five Supervisor James Travirca, was unable to attend the meeting.

However, as County Engineer Larry Seal pointed out, waiting until 1989 before any work is done could cause more damage to the existing beach, seawall and Beach Road.

Seal advised the board to try to shorten the time until the study is completed because, in his opinion, the seawall and road are continuing to rapidly deteriorate. "If it's left alone until 1989, the only thing that will be left will be north of the groins," Seal stated, referring to drainage pipes and other structures that have retained triangular patches of beach in several areas by guarding the sand from wave action and erosion.

The county has been doing some patchwork repairs along the seawall and Beach Road, but the board has become concerned about the money being spent, Courrege said.

The board has dicussed going to Washington, D.C., to meet with Congressman Trent Lott, who was instrumental in initiating the county's attempts to obtain federal money for beach repair, in hopes of expediting the study. According to Champion, one of the major costs of replacing the sand beach originally pumped in as an emergency shore protection measure in the mid-1960s will be obtaining enough sand of a suitable grade and bringing it to Hancock

He said no matter how wide the new beach is, more sand will have to be pumped in every few years because the Hancock County shoreline has an erosion process that does not trap sand from one part of the beach further down the shoreline.

Seal, working with a calculator, said it would take about 66 acres of sand 10 feet deep to replace the sand beach along the entire shoreline.

The board, however, is not interested in having a sand beach in Cedar Point and the area north of US-90, where there is only a seawall

Because the Corps does not address recreational concerns, the major purpose of a sand beach as addressed by the study is protection of the seawall and beach road, Champion stated.

He added that the county will never be able to do away with the problem of beach maintenance. Perniciaro said the city of Bay St.

Louis owns a presently unused source of sand that is located from about Webb Street to near his residence, which is on Old Spanish Trail. He described hitting white sand while digging in his yard, He has also suggested sweep mining of sand from the bottom of the Mississippi Sound.

"You've got pockets of good sand, scattered all around," Champion said. "It's just a matter of finding it or it being close enough to pump."

Champion said the county might consider placing a bulkhead between the sand beach and water, but cautioned that doing so would create a pocket of deep water because wave action would make a hole five or six feet deep at the base of the bulkhead.

Such a structure would be suitable for fishing, but not for swimming or wading, Champion said.

Ladner said he was not in favor of the bulkhead type of structure. Although the structure would last 25 to 30 years, it would eventually require replacement.

Without a bulkhead, the county will have to pump in some new sand every few years, Champion explain-

There is also a risk of damage from storms. "You stand a chance of putting the beach in one day and then losing it during the next hurricane season," the design engineer said. The board is presently waiting for the result of borings Martin had stated would provide information on soil content off the existing beaches and might possibly provide a source Other suggestions included a stone dike in front of the seawall to protect it, which the board felt would be ex-pensive and did not favor. Kellar said stone em used on some of the county's bridges and the major result turned out to be "It won't stay there. When we did it with some of our bridges, people kept carrying off stones... Some of them looked like they used sledgehammers to take them out," the supervisor explained. The board members said they preferred sheet piling or some type of filter fabric and riprap. Another suggestion still being con-SEAWALL—Page 5A

MISSISSIPPI STATE - With most of the wheat crop harvested and sold, Mississippi wheat farmers will soon decide what varieties to plant next vear.

Over 250,000 acres of wheat were planted last winter and 90 percent of that acreage is now in storage, according to Dr. Wayne Houston, an agronomist with the Mississippi Cooperative Extension Service.

"The condition of our wheat crop statewide is excellent," Houston said. "Most of the 225,000 acres already harvested has been replanted in soybeans." Although State wheat farmers planted fewer acres this year -350,000 in 1986 - and had fewer yields, the quality of grain harvested now should make up for less yield, Houston said. Many varieties are showing good test weight per bushel, thus adding dollar value to the crop:

"A filled-out grain will be heavier, and a heavier grain can bring more value to farmers and to the buyers of the crop," Houston said.

The quality of yield is better this year than in 1986 because of the success of the delayed planting program farmers undertook last winter. After a severe problem with Hessian fly damage in 1986, wheat farmers planted later than usual in November, interrupting the life cycle of the flies.

'The message we want to send now is that our variety plots are essentially harvested and we will be gathering data on variety resistance to insects and diesease," the agronomist said. "With this data, farmers can decide what wheat varieties to plant next year."

In related agricultural news, county extension agents reported progress made in the state's field crops despite rain in some areas and drought in others.

In Tishomingo County, extension agent William Hopper said his wheat farmers have averaged 35 to 38 bushels per acre and that soybean planting was finished.

Scott County agent William Goodwin said evening rain has kept farming on hold but county crops are looking better. Insects in cotton have been a problem and some spraying for them has been done.

Rain is also slowing farm activity in Lincoln County, said county agent Stanford Qualls. "Some land preparation for summer planting is being done and the pastures are in good condition, he said.

In Union County, soybeans are still being planted and will continue for the next two weeks, said county agent Ed McWhirter. "Some farmers are considering delaying planting until moisture is found," he

Ag Affairs by Ed Blake

At the Sweet Potato Capitol of the World in Mississippi's Calhoun County, farmers who grow the delicious, mostly-southern, table staple call their control of sales from the field to the supermarket "peddling." Others call it marketing.

But regardless of the word reference to their marketing system, Mississippi sweet potato growers have developed one of the most foolproof and profitable marketing systems in modern agriculture.

Most of the approximately 150 sweet potato growers in Calhoun and adjoining Chickasaw counties sell direct to large retail chain stores, multiplying by several times their share of the dollars spent by hordes of southerners who appreciate the taste and vitamin content of sweet

The system works well because farmers who grow yams in a crescent shaped belt of especially well suited soil in those two counties produce a specialty crop that is not grown in over-abundance over the nation like some crops. And the potatoes store well on the farm for up to a year when they are handled right. Temperatures of potatoes in storage stay generally in the 50 to 60 degree range after initially curing at about 80 degrees.

Sweet potato production in this north central Mississippi section stems mostly from a precedent set by John Russell Penick whose family had brought him into Mississippi at age 14 by wagon from Martin, Tennessee. The year was 1914 when Penick's father Herbert sent the women in the family to Mississippi by train, and the men brought the family belongings in wagons, driving their cattle and farm workstock along with them and camping as nightfall caught them en route.

They settled just north of the present town of Vardaman and grew typical subsistence crop. As John Russell Penick grew into manhood as a farmer he discovered that sweet pototoes thrived particularly well in the sandy and sandy loam soil where they settled. When his sons, Charles and J.R., reached a productive age they gradually increased the size of their sweet potato fields or patches to the maximum that they could handleabout eight acres. They planted the slips in the springtime by pushing them into freshly plowed soil with a notched hickory stick, and they were harvested with a turning plow and picked up by hand. Sweet potato farming began to shape the lives of the two sons who today are full time potato farmers and shippers. Charles Penick, who today grows about 50 acres of sweet potatoes, considers himself a peddlerbecause he sells direct to retail groceries. His brother J. R. not only grows potatoes but buys and ships them as a broker from a large warehouse on Highway

8 just east of Vardaman.

Most of the growers in the two counties, like Charles Penick, "peddle" or sell to retail stores. They do not retail from parked trucks because that would be a violation of their relationship with their retail merchants and also the practice would require special licensing.

Growers who sell to retailers have modern storage sheds where potatoes are stacked in 20-bushel containers which are moved about with motorized end-loaders. Ventilation and temperatures are carefully controlled and they remain unwashed to protect the potatoes from deterioration.

Today Charles Penick, with considerable help from his wife Eve, grows about 50 acres of sweet potatoes. Their son Gary is a full time member of the farming team and daughter Terri helps out several weeks each year. They call themselves "small farmers" and do not want to expand much beyond their family's labor capacity. Some farmers in the belt grow up to 100 and 200 acres and rely on more hired labor. The Penicks hire mostly young people at peak times. Most of their deliveries are within 200 miles radius. They use modern farming, harvesting and hauling equipment today. Although they see no looming major changes in their family industry, the Penicks state that the sweet potato market is stable because it is a favorite food for a lot of people, yet they see a generation problem because buying and food preparation habits are undergoing a change. The younger set of consumers favor foods that require little preparation, and sweet potatoes need peeling, for Saute the sausage (bulk or slices) with a bit of water over low heat, in a large saucepan, for 15 minutes, remove, then drain as needed, leaving sufficient drippings to cook the onion and okra.

Cook until the okra stops "roping," say 40 minutes or so. If the okra starts to scorch, add a little water.

Return the sausage to the pan, add the thyme and bay leaf, but do not stir. Turn the whole business over with a pancake turner every several minutes.

Add the tomatoes, sugar and seasoning. Cover and simmer for 15 minutes or so. (Four to six servings.)

A LEADER SETS THE PACE! How We Brought Home the "Bacon."

On June 11th the State of Mississippi gave birth to an innovative new venture. The dream of a few individuals came true.

October 1984-the year I took office, I called the director of Research and Development. Dr. James Meredith, and asked him to meet with officials at NSTL. It seemed that there wasn't any real working relationship between NSTL and the state other than the usual "permit" type com-

Dr. Meredith and I sat around the conference table at NSTL with just a handfull of people and talked about the needs of both NSTL and the State of Mississippi, wondering what we could do for each other that would help to strengthen our area and our relationships.

NSTL expressed their need as one of lack of space, additional room for expansion, housing for new branches of the many related activities that were already part of their family; space for new ideas, new business ventures to flourish and bloom. Mississippi's needs were ones of translating technology from NSTL into new high-paying jobs, a new tax base, access to the vast bank of knowledge that is available through the computer system's and personnel that are NSTL

Dr. Meredith returned to Jackson, I came home to dream. January 1985—the plan had been formulated for the Technology Transfer Center. The Objectives—to provide needed space for new ventures at NSTL both for the federal and private sector to create new jobs and build good will. To build a bridge between NSTL and the State of Mississippi that would serve us both well.

The next step was to convince the Governor and the Legislature that we were on the right track.

Legislation was introduced in both House and Senate. Senator Gene Taylor from Hancock County engineered it through the Senate. But the Senate legislation died in the House Appropriations Committee. At that point all seemed lost, but where there is the will there is usually another way.

On a rare working Sunday, I offered an amendment to amend the Economic Development Appropriation to include funding for the Technology Transfer Center. With help from Pearl River and Hancock County Representatives, it was adopted and passed. Chairman Ed Perry and Senator Glen Dewease held our position tight on the conference committee. The legislation survived the process: Trent Lott and John Stennis steered legislation through the national congress that was needed to gain permission to build on federal land. Nothing like this had ever been done before. Sounds simple? What really made the difference? Your representative did their lobbying. Early in January I started talking with my colleagues one at a time, educating them to my objectives and getting commitments of support. During the floor action when they were needed, they were there. When I think of the Technology Transfer Center, I will remember the remarks that Dave Sims, the editor of the Picayune Item wrote, "Some people think we have enough technology, but there are others who can see beyond it to breakthroughs we haven't imagined yet. They are the dreamers, and they hold the keys to the future."

"The future will spring from places such as the Technology Transfer Center. Mississippians will be part of it, as the technology flows out to private business which in turn will find the markets and create the jobs."

The building we accomplished collectively by the team, but my dream follows the philosophy of Henry Ford: "Find a need and fill it."

Leaders must be dreamers. They must have vision beyond just today. I am proud of my part in this dream, a vision that now has become a reality.

Proyen leaderhip, experience and ability are needed in your District 47 Senate Seat. I know by the track record that I have and that I offer you PROVEN PERFORMANCE.

As we waited to start a Hancock County Chamber of Commerce meeting on Tuesday night two of the board members were late.

Their reason was because there was a head-on collision on Highway 603 near the Bayou La Croix bridge.

One of the topics on the agenda was a Highway 603 discussion with the State Highway Commis-

The chamber directors are very concerned about the number of accidents and fatalities on the dangerous highway.

Many residents of the county will tell you they try and avoid the use of the highway and only do so when there is no other way.

If one travels from one end of the county to the other, Highway 603 is the route because there isn't any other way without many miles of extra travel.

We are still hoping and looking forward to the day when Highway 603 will be four-laned from U.S. 90 in the South to Highway 53 in the North of Hancock County.

Many local residents are visiting the Farmers Market on Saturday and Wednesday mornings to purchase fresh produce.

Local farmers have a wide variety of fresh produce at this time of the year.

The Farmers Market is co-sponsored by the Extension Service and Hancock County Chamber of Commerce and is located at the County Fairgrounds on Longfellow Road.

Farmers usually arrive at about 7 a.m. and remain until about noon.

We hope to see you at the Farmers Market.

Governor Bill Allain

SERVING AS GOVERNOR A GREAT HONOR

By now, you have probably read or heard press accounts of a news conference I recently held to explain my reasons for not seeking a second term as governor of Mississippi ASI told the reporters, there is no singular reason why I chose not to run again.

A lot of my decision resulted from my strong belief that a campaign against a sitting governor at this time of steady, but slow, economic recovery would have been detrimental to the state. Rather than having candidates trying to criticize the accomplishments we have made in four years and the ongoing programs we are supporting, I believe the people of Mississippi should be hearing candidates who propose solutions to the problems of the

I cannot explain to many of you why I did not run. I wish I could sit down with everyone who encouraged me to run, even to the final hours of the final day of qualifying. The people of Mississippi have been very supportive and encouraging of me during these four years. And for that and for the opportunity to serve as your governor, I will always be thankful.

Let me assure you that I intend to be governor for the next six months, just as I promised you in 1983. I will be travelling around Mississippi, visiting with you and hearing your concerns for the future of Mississippi. This type of contact with the people of our state is one of the most enjoyable parts of being your governor.

we have several very important projects pending at this time, and I hope to have them well underway before I leave office in January. One of these projects is the multi-billion dollar super collider that the state of Mississippi will be applying for later this summer. It could mean a vast economic and research boom for Mississippi.

Lintend to continue promoting the need for Constitutional reform in Mississippi because we need to update our 1890 Constitution to deal with today's problems. I hope the candidates for governor this year are asked about their stands on a constitutional convention.

Overall, I like being governor. We have accomplished many things during our administration, with your help. We have made gains in economic development, where we gained 83,000 jobs and the unemployment rate dropped three points. We have made gains in the employment and appointment of thousands of Mississippians who had never had a voice in government before. We have reorganized state government to create a stronger governor's office for the person who follows us.

There is much work to do: I pledge to you that I will be around in some capacity after this term to help do that work.

Eyes on Mississippi

By Bill Minor

JACKSON— No wonder county boards of supervisors in Mississippi have always been a happy hunting ground for culvert and road machinery vendors and salesmen offering bribes and kickbacks on pur-

The reason: Mississippi counties spend big bucks on maintenance of county roads and bridges. More, in fact, than county governments in many larger and wealthier states.

The latest available 1985 report of the Federal Highway Administration of the U.S. Department of Transportation giving a breakdown on expenditures by counties in each state for road purposes, shows Mississippi counties spent a total of $117,447,000 on road and bridge maintenance.

That $117.4 million spent by Mississippi counties significantly exceeds comparable states such as Kansas, whose counties spent only $100.5 million, or Washington which spent only $108.1 million.

It was more than some larger states such as Georgia, which spend $111.6 million, or Missouri, which spent $84.6 million; Tennessee, $81.7 million or Indiana; $85.8 million.

Nearby, Alabama, while somewhat Agger than Mississippi spent only slightly more, $120.6 million, and neighbor Arkansas showed only $35.5 million spent by counties on road and bridge maintenance. Kentucky was at $40.6 million and South Carolina, $25.6 million.

Conservatively, at least 40 percent of the $117.4 million spent by counties in Mississippi on road and bridge maintenance went for commodities such as culverts, grader blades and machinery, etc. This means $47 million in potential sales for vendors and suppliers who sell these commodities.

Testimony and evidence in the first trial of a supervisor on charges growing out of the FBI's Operation Pretense indicated that 12 percent was the going rate for kickbacks on culverts.

The 12 percent kickback rate on culverts evidently also applied to road machinery, based on evidence shown last week when U.S. District Judge William Barbour sentenced Billy Rex Lott, a Hattiesburg equipment salesman, to six years in prison.

Lott, a onetime Ole Miss football star, had pleaded guilty to paying a Greene County supervisor $5,000 on a $38,800 road grinder purchased by Greene County in the fall of 1986.

This would mean that almost $6 million in under the table money has been dangled in front of supervisors statewide. Assuming that only one-third of the supers would take the bait, that's a cushy $2 million which has been slipping into supervisors' pockets each year.

If there have been more than a third of the supervisors on the take—and many believe there have been—then the kickback take has been even higher.

What is significant in the Federal Highway Administration report is that of the total funds received by Mississippi counties for highway purposes, only $47.2 million of it is provided by local taxes or other local sources.

The state of Mississippi provides the biggest share of county highway revenue, $66 million. The federal government provides the other $54.1 million.

So, when a county supervisor steals money out of expenditures for roads in his county, he is not only stealing money from the county, but state and federal money as well.

Of course, the fact that federal funds are involved in road expenditures of Mississippi supervisors is what brought the FBI and the federal courts into the picture, and brought the powerful weight of the federal government down on the free-wheeling county supervisor system in Mississippi.

County roads, incidently, are under state control either partially, or completely, in at least six states. All county roads are under the state in North Carolina, West Virginia, and Delaware. All but two counties in Virginia, 10 counties in Alabama, and six counties in Maryland are under state supervision.

The other day when District Judge Barbour dealt out the tough prison sentence to Lott, the road machinery salesman, he made an observation which gets to the heart of the permissive system the State Legislature has allowed to exist with regard to regulating equipment salesmen.

Barbour said, "If the system in this state allows an unscrupulous salesman to offer such bribes or kickbacks to supervisors, then there is no way for a county to get a fair break on its tax dollars for the peo-

That raises the question why the Legislature has failed to require the licensing and regulation of road equipment and supply vendors by the state, years after knowing about the kickback system and road machinery.

I happen to know about that, because I reported with documentation, how the kickback system on equipment worked, way back in 1962.

ABC declares war on liquor raffles

June 24, 1987

Dear Sir.

Recently my non-profit organization attempted to raffle off a liquor basket. Although I personally would prefer to offer something else, it is a tried and true fund raiser here on the Coast and one that is within reach of the little nickel and dime groups.

Mr. David Mills of the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board has informed us that this activity is illegal and that we would be prosecuted if we held the raffle. A Seiko watch was substituted.

I do not dispute its illegality. As was formerly the case with bingo and Las Vegas nights, long standing tradition does not supercede the law. However, I had been told by others at the ABC that they had bigger fish to fry.

Apparently that job has been done so well, or they are so overstaffed, they have declared open season on us polliwogs. Our attorney was informed of the ABC's intention to vigorously prosecute churches, schools, booster clubs, auxiliaries, etc. who use this method of fund raising.

Therefore, little fund raisers take note: expect a representative of the ABC to be present at every fair, festival, jamboree, crawfish boil, high school football game, spaghetti supper, and so on.

They are certainly going to be busy! After all, it would hardly be a crackdown if only one group was prosecuted and 99 others fell through the crack.

Polliwogs, be on the lookout for the ABC man 'cause he's looking for you. Oh, he won't be wearing a white

Q: Should I keep all my medicines in the refrigerator?

A: A general rule of thumb is that all medicines will last longer in the refrigerator but not the freezer. If you're put on short-term medications, like antibiotic capsules, refrigeration is not important; they'll all be taken long before any deterioration could occur. If, on the other hand, you're on a long-term medicine which is taken infrequently, you probably would do well to gefrigerate it.

In general, liquids demand refrigeration more than capsules or tablets. There are a few exceptions to these rules, so you should consult your pharmacist about your specific medicines.

you and your medical history, I'm afraid all I can do is speculate about this problem. If you've ever had stomach surgery, you may be having "dumping syndrome" which can produce spells like yours after large meals.

Another possibility is that you may have what doctors call an "irritable bowel" syndrome. Both of these problems respond fairly well to medications which slow and relax the actions of the stomach and intestines. Another possibility, although remote, is that you may be having very unusual seizures of the type which are called "temporal lobe" by physicians.

Regardless; I agree that this is a significant medical problem and merits a thorough evaluation. A good place to start would be with your nearest "gastroenterologist."

Q: I missed your original article about the changing of toothbrushes. Could you repeat it?

A: We've received dozens of letters asking about that column. Basically, the advice was "If frequent throat infections are a prophlem, try changing your toothbrush every two weeks for awhile."

It seems some people reinfect themselves while brushing their teeth with old toothbrushes. Judging from our mail on the subject, frequent changing of toothbrushes seems to be extremely helpful.

Mississippi's aggressive effort to land the federal government's proposed $6 billion superconducting Super Collider Project seems to have immediate benefits. And, just as true, at least 30 other states are competing for the project which will bring with it related high-technology industry and revenues over and above the announced $6 billion flyestment.

But consider what has already happened in Mississippi.
Development of the proposal has been assigned to the state's Institute for Technology Development.

University and private engineers have agreed on a proposed site should the project come to Mississippi. The site is in northeast Mississippi, incliding the counties of Lowndes, Oktibbeha, and Clay.

Private attorneys are involved in preparation and coordination of the detailed proposal. Local chambers of commerce in the northeast region of the state and in other sections have endorsed the location of the project in Mississippi. Finally, all Mississippians seem to be enthusiastic about the state's aggressive effort to land the massive project for Mississippi.

All this togetherness comes at a time when the Legislature has just completed a session which saw sectionalism rear its ugly head across the legislative chambers and up and down the state.

Former governor's grandson seeking state auditor's post

JACKSON— Calling for greater coperation among government officials, 39 year old Pete Johnson of Clarksdale has announced his candidacy for state auditor. Pledging to provide strong leadership in the post, Johnson said that he will stress continuing education for state and audit department employees "to ensure the highest level of professionalism."

"It is vital, especially in the auditor's office, that all employees are current in their knowledge of laws and of procedures. This office carries great responsibility, both to the people of this state and also to the elected officials," he said.

"While I will not hesitate to deal swiftly with wrong-doers, I alsobelieve it is the responsibility of the state auditor to work closely with those dealing with public funds to ensure that they and their staffs understand the laws regarding proper handling of the taxpayers' money," Johnson said.

Johnson is a graduate of Ole Miss, the Jackson School of Law, and the Louisiana State University School of Banking of the South.

Grandson of the late Paul B. Johnson Sr. who was a U.S. congressman and governor of Mississippi and the nephew of Paul B. Johnson Jr., former lt. governor and governor, Johnson says his desire to serve the people came from a family history "steeped in the tradition of service." Johnson cited his experience in banking and financial and business management as qualifications for the office.

he office.

At age 26, he was named head of one of the 'state's largest trust departments and was then promoted to senior vice president. In 1982, Johnson left the banking business consulting firm. Currently he is chairman of the board of United Financial Resource Corporation, a national consulting firm which provides financial industry to form a financial and management advice and consultation to financial institutions.

The company's interests include business management, earnings improvement, 'lob' evaluation' and salary administration programs. Johnson also has been active in his community and state serving as chairman of the Mississippi Marketing Council; chairman of the Coahoma County Industrial Foundation; chairman of the Northwest Mississippi Regional Medical Center Physician's Recruitment Team; chairman of the Coahoma County Key Community Task Force and Sales Team; chairman of the Coahoma County Airport Board and president of Mississippi Young Bankers Association.

Johnson is married to the former Margaret Birdsong of Clarksdale. They have two daughters, Mary Margaret, 13, and Anne Clark, 10.

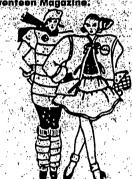

The family belongs to the first Presbyterian Church of Clarksdale where Johnson serves as a deacon.

STARKVILLE - Dr. William "Bill" Bost announced his candidacy for commissioner of agriculture saying that current commissioner of agriculture has sat idly by and done nothing while the agricultural sector in Mississippi's economy has gone virtually bankrupt.

poisoning, and if there is, how can you prevent it? W. M., Eunice, La.

A. According to Dr. Marilyn Ray, dermatologist at Ochsner Clinic, New Orleans, sun poisoning has nothing to do with any kind of poisoning of the body from the sun at all. The description of the ailment is a laymen's term for what is really known as "polymorphic light eruption" or simply a rash which occurs in some individuals after they've been exposed to the sun.

The red rash can appear on varying parts of the body which have been exposed to the sun sometimes extending to non-exposed areas and is usually uncomfortable because of itching. It may begin hours to several days after exposure to the sun, and may occur with headache and eye discomfort when in bright light. The cause is unknown, yet there is some evidence that it may be an inherited trait. There are two types of sun rays, UVA and UVB. Long-wave rays or (UVA rays) are rays which cannot be screened by usual methods and may cause this type of rash, though 85 percent are caused by light with the sunburn or UVB spectrum. For example, a person sensitive to UVA rays may be in a car with the windows up and still get a rash from the rays coming in through the window. The UVA sufferer, naturally, will have a harder time protecting himself from the rays therefore will more likely suffer from the rash. There are many new sunscreens available on the market which will screen out the

Q. Is there such a thing as sun UVA rays. Rarely, people with the disease will break out after exposure to wavelengths even longer than UVA, the visible light spectrum, and the sun screens for UVB or UVA will not work. People with this type of rash need to protect their skin with an opaque sunscreen, such as one containing zinc oxide, and wear protective clothing. Treatment of "sun poisoning" can involve oral medications and external treatments which can be prescribed by a dermatologist. There are some other conditions, such as a drug rash and lupus erythematosus, which may mimic polymorphic light eruption. This needs to be diagnosed by a trained dermatologist. Usually those that have severe reactions will seek treatment, the rest simply learn to live with the problem and avoid sun exposure, which Dr. Ray says, is probably one of the best things anyone can do whether they suffer from this condition or not.

"I am confident of winning this election because of the strong leadership of our gubernatorial candidates at the top of the Republican ticket and the growing desire of Mississippi voters for practical minded business people to guide the State on a path of progress," Colom said in making his announcement.

Senator Thad Cochran praised Colom as a highly qualified candidate and an example that the Republican Party is the party of the future.

"Wil Colom came up through the ranks of the Party, contributed money, time and energy, and earned the respect of Party officials and those who worked with him," said Cochran. "He will have widespread support, not because he is black but because he is the best person for the

"It's ironic," said Republican Party Chairwoman Ebbie Spivy, "that not the Democratic Party, which as been the beneficiary of most Black votes, but the Republican Party that fields the first Black candidate in a state-wide race..it just shows where the true party of the people can be found."

"It may surprise some people but I will never ask any Black person to vote for me because I am Black, I will ask them not to turn me away as a candidate because I am a Republican alone. Compare me to my opponents is all that I ask," stated Colom.

Colom, 37, was born in Ripley, Mississippi. He has practiced law in Columbus since 1977.

State treasurer candidate outlines platform

Guy Land, a Democratic candidate for state treasurer, is urging aggressive use of a program allowing counties to issue bonds jointly for problems which extend across coun-

"Multi-county bond issues could make a real difference in how counties address regional problems by providing capital for economic development," Land told reporters last week at news conferences in Columbus, Tupelo, Indianola, Meridian, Pascagoula, and the Laurel-Hattiesburg area.

"The state treasurer's office should be the leader in providing the necessary guidance and legal advice to county supervisors and other officials as they work to solve local problems at the least possible cost to Mississippi taxpayers.

"Joint bond issues would save tax dollars by reducing the costs that characteristically accompany the issuing of bonds," Land said of his proposal.

"Instead of each county paying separate fees to lawyers and bankers who prepare bond issues, these fees would be paid only once with the counties involved sharing the financial burden. Also, multicounty bonds would reduce the amount of interest required to be paid on the bonds, which is ultimately paid by the taxpayers."

Land, who as counsel and legislative coordinator to Senator John Stennis helped draft federal bond legislation, told reporters that by going in together, counties will be able to actually raise the capital necessary to solve problems.

Under Land's proposal, joint bond issues would be completely optional for the counties. "In general, it would be up to the boards of supervisors to agree to these joint efforts. and the public would still vote approval of bond issues."

"The state Treasurer is more than just a person who counts the state's money." Land said. "He must be the state's chief financial thinker. This program of multi-county bond issues is one specific way the treasurer can help make government work more efficiently in Mississippi.'

APPRAISER HEADCHES Q: I recently read where a number of banks were blaming their bad loans on faulty appraisals. What is currently happening in regard to real estate appraisers? H.H., Meridan

A: Dear H.H. For the beleagured industry, already trying to straighten out its own house after charges that faulty appraisals contributed to the problems of faltering lenders, the current housing boom is creating new challenges.

Lower interest rates are bringing more buyers into the market, while encouraging many homeowners to refinance.

Thus, the sheer volume of demand for their services is burdening appraisers. But perhaps more troublesome is the strong demand in some area that is driving up sales prices, in some instances to the extent that the buyer is paying more than the asking price.

This upward pressure on sales prices means that the value of comparable homes, which an appraiser uses to estimate the value of a given property, is also rising.

Can these current high prices be sustained or are properties being temporarily overvalued? In the current environment, the value determined may significantly exceed the value determined under more normal supply and demand conditions.

But the appraiser must use the most recent sales figures, although his or her estimate may appear unrealistic as the housing market moves upward toward a new equilibrium.

On a broader basis, meanwhile, the largest real estate appraisal organizations are dissecting their whole industry operation and exploring various proposals which they hope will upgrade the service appraisers provide.

Among these are uniform standards of practice, a uniform appraisal form, and even mandatory government certification, as advocated by the American Institute of Real Estate Appraisers.

Soul searching is never easy. Neither is voluntary "mending of the ways." But some important changes in the way in which appraisers operate are in the offering.

RES ior Auxiliary partial fencing, the mayor noted. Approval of the land and water conservation grant, released through the Interior Department's Federal Recreation Bureau, was announced this week by U.S. Senator Thad Cochran of Mississippi, member of the Senate Appropriations Committee's Subcommittee on

"I am pleased that the agency is making this money available for this Bay St. Louis project," the senator

Franckiewicz noted the improvements are limited to the three named parks because they are owned and operated by the city, a requirement for the federal grant.

Other city parks, such as McDonald Field and Commagere Park are leased by the city. Facilities near the Bay High Football Stadium are owned by the Bay-Waveland School District.

"We would like to commend Mary Harris of the city's Parks and Playgrounds Commission who did all the footwork in securing this grant," the mayor added.

"Without her efforts we would not have gotten the money," he said.

Jobless rate drops in Mississippi

JACKSON - The May jobless rate for Mississippi was 8.9 percent, according to Mississippi Employment Security Commission Executive Director Thomas H. Dyson.

This represents a decrease of four tenths of a percentage point from one month ago when the rate was 9.3 percent.

The May 1986 unemployment rate stood at 11.7 percent, two and eight tenths percentage points above this year.

There has been a combined decrease of three and eight tenths percentage points since January. It was caused by improvements in both manufacturing and non-manufacturing industries. Place of residence employment for May stood at 1,054,000 in labor force of 1,156,900. Employment increased by 13,500 individuals from one month ago. When compared to one year ago, we find a net gain in employment 15,300.

Manufacturing establishments provided 223,200 jobs. Nonmanufacturing businesses provided 640,300 jobs in May. Manufacturing jobs increased 400 from one month ago and 800 from May 1986. Nonmanufacturing provided 12,700 more jobs this year than one year ago. The monthly increase of 2,200 was caused by increases in all nonmanufacturing except mining which remained constant and government which lost 800.

Thee were 93,875 claims filed in May 1987 as compared to 120,742 during April and 129,874 one year ago. Claims filed for unemployment compensation have decreased by 65,293 since January when 159,168 were recorded. There were 8,629 job openings received in May compared to . 8.641 last month and 8,771 one year ago. Of those received 6,996; 7,049; and 6,655 were filled by local Employment Service Offices.

Gov. Bill Allain has announced that the Department of Community information concerning the FY 1987 Development (DCD), Governor's Office of Federal-State Programs, will administer the federally funded Rental Rehabilitation Program for Rental rehabilitation grants will be distributed to local units of government in Mississippi on a competitive basis to support the rehabilitation of privately owned rental property. The state's FY 1987 allocation is $1,120,000. The purpose of the program is to help provide affordable, standard housing for low-income families. The state has established a standard requiring that at least 70 percent of families benefiting from the program must be lower income.

This will be the fourth year of DCD's administration of the Rental Rehabilitation Program.

To increase your chance of success, create a high, open shade by pruning away some of the trees' lower branches. Select a spot which receives morning sun and afternoon shade if possible. Where tree roots interfere, consider raised beds or container gardening.

Let's start with heavily shaded garden spots. The most popular bedding plant for the shade is also the number one bedding plant in the U.S., the impatiens. Gardeners choose impatiens for a variety of reasons in addition to their shade tolerance.

They are among the lowest maintenance annuals, and provide good branching without pinching. Plants are available in an array of heights from 8 to 24 inches. A rainbow of brillant colors is available from flowers that never cease to bloom from early summer until

TIMBERLINE

By Mark Jamieson Hancock County Forester

There's a lot of difference between my job and the work of a game warden or biologist with the Department of Wildlife Conservation.

But while their agency deals mainly with managing and protecting game and fish, and mine deals mainly with the establishment and protection of commercial timberland, we do have a few things in common.

Take fishing for instance. Now you're probably thinking I'm going to "fess up" and tell you that I spend a lot of my field time these days alongside some out-of-the-way little pond dragging in bluegills and an occasional largemouth bass with my mail order fold-up fishing rig.

Wrong. What I am going to tell you about is a special kind of tree that you can plant in your yard or back on the old home place and grow a bait that is "deadly" when it comes to attrating those big orange-bellied bream and most anything else that has fins, and swims, and is hungry!

A lot of people call it a "catawba" tree. It's actually a Southern Catalpa (catalpa bignonioides). I'll get back to talking about growing bait on it a little later in the column. Right now I want to tell you a few things about the tree itself. First of all, it's a small to mediumsized tree that you'll find scattered around all over the State. A lot of them have been planted for fenceposts. The hearwood is very durable and resistant to insects, decay and destructive weathering.

Some people have made fine longlasting outdoor furniture out of Catalpa. The Catalpa has large heartshaped leaves, clusters of white flowers and fruit (seed) pods that grow 6-18 inches long.

Some people also call the Catalpa "caterpillar tree" of "fish-bait tree." That's because the larvae of a cetain sphinx moth likes to eat Catalpa leaves and those frisky, tough little caterpillars are hard for a hungry fish to resist.

Reminds me of what an old-timer once said about the putrid smelling jar of catfish bait his fishing companion had sprung the lid on... "S-o-o-on-n, they got to come to that!"

Catalpa is fairly easy to grow. The seed ripens in the early Fall (October-November). Each pod has dozens of hairy little seeds.

Get some in the Fall and store them in a cool, dry place until Spring. Take them out for planting about the time you normally start your spring garden. Put them in rows about 30 inches apart. Plant the seed one-half inch deep and about a half inch apart in the row.

You'll need to keep them watered good. In about two weeks they should come up. Thin your seedlings to about 6 or 8 inches apart. Sidedress the plants with a light dose of triple-8 to keep them growing at a good rate through the Summer and Transplant in the Winter, January is probably the best month. Put them in good soil. They don't do too well in wet, flatwood soils or deep

In a few years, after they get on up in size (6 to 8 ft.) they should start getting visits from big gray or brown moths with wing-spreads of about three inches. They do most of their flying at night.

The female lays about a thousand eggs in a cluster on the leaves. Ten to 14 days later the eggs become larvae (caterpillars) that begin to eat the leaves and grow to good fishbait

Why not find a neighbor with some Catalpa seed to sell or give away this Fall and start your own "fishbait factory?

I might even be willing to come by and help you collect the caterpillars in a few years if I can talk my way out of weekend chores. I think I know a pond or two where the bream will be just about the right size by the time your trees start bearing a good crop of "Catawba worms."

One final closing thought: Have you ordered your pine or hardwood seedlings for planting next Winter? You need to do that pretty soon.

The average adult has about 3,500 square inches of skin. The skin has roughly a billion pores.

Bay Police Detective Chuck James said Patrolman David Parker, while patroling the Cedar Point area at around 4 a.m. on Saturday, stopped a vehicle for a traffic violation and observed a small television set on the back seat. The driver of the vehicle, Stephen Stanley of Kiln, was arrested and charged with burglary of a dwelling when officers discovered a Chartres Street residence had been burglarized. James stated.

At the burglarized residence, entry was made by tearing out the screen on a porch, officers also found a large color television and two clock radios left on the lawn, according to James.

A little later a second subject, Russell Hill of Waveland, surrendered at the Bay St. Louis Police Department in connection with the burglary, James said.

Bond was set at $10,000 each in connection with the burglary. The suspects are scheduled to appear before Bay St. Louis City Court Judge John Chevis.

Don't blow your lid when your canning lids don't seal. Prepare lids properly and you'll keep your temper and your home canned foods safe. Here's a test to find out if you know how. True or false?

1. Mayonnaise and other similar iars are unsuitable for home cann-

2. Firmly tightened lids ensure adequate sealing.

3. Ring bands should be removed before storing canned foods. 4. Only two-piece self-sealing lids are recommended for sealing jars of jams and preserves.

5. Zine and glass cap lids with rubber gaskets are suitable for use in home canning. 6. The plastic handle of a rubber spatula is an excellent tool to remove air from jars before sealing. 7. The flat lid of two-piece selfsealing or vacuum sealing lid is concave when jars have vacuum. 8. Jars should be cooled at least 12 hours before testing seals.

9. Jars should be inverted during cooling. 10. Only can what you can consume in a year. 11. With the exception of pickles and jellies, it is important to use the size of jar that holds the amount of food your family will eat at one meal 12. To sterilize jars when processing time is only five minutes, empty, clean jars should be in an upright position, covered with water and boiled for 15 minutes.

Answers

1. True - These make good refrigerator storage jars. You can use some of the sturdy tapered jars in freezing. They are not intended for reuse in canning. They are not tempered to stand extreme heat and pressure and either do not use standard jar lids or have a narrow (therefore uncertain) sealing surface. They should never be used for canning low-acid foods (all foods except pickles, jams and jellies, fruits and tomatoes), which are canned in the pressure canner.

2. False - Seals are formed by a vacuum created when jars are cooling. The degree of vacuum in jars depends on air exhausted from jars during heat processing, and on proper headspace control.

3. True – It is easy to remove them 12 to 24 hours after the jars have cooled, but may be difficult to do so at a later time. Ring bands have no purpose after the jars have cooled. Removing them before storing allows you to remove food residues from jar threads and to wash ring bands to prevent them from rusting.

4. True — Paraffin seals often become unsealed in storage, and allow growth of air-borne molds on the exposed food, discoloration of food exposed to air and development of off flavors. Using self-sealing lids prevents these quality losses and mold growth. 5. False - Sealing jars with these lids requires four perfect sealing surfaces instead of two required with self-sealing lids. Further, testing for seals with these lids is a guessing game!

6. True - The plastic handle will not damage or nick the jar glass and is flexible. Jar bottoms nicked by pointed knives are more likely to break during heat processing.

7. True - The flat lid is flexible, and is pulled down by the vacuum formed during cooling. The concave appearance of the flat lid is a clean signal of sealed jars.

8. True - A 12-hour cooling period is needed to form a vacuum. During this time, the gasket will cool too. Once a good vacuum is formed, ring bands should be removed and jar threads washed before storing the jars. Once a vacuum is formed, the flat lid will be held firmly in place. 9. False – This practice was recommended for open-kettle canning, which itself is no longer recommended. Inverting jars during cooling may cause seal failure. 10. True - While properly canned food is safe to eat as long as jars remain vacuum sealed, the food quality gradually declines during storage. Jar lids may eventually rust through and break the seals; this is especially true of jars filled with acid foods.

11. True - Too often foods are packed in quarts only because of habit. As family size changes so should jar size. Try to use jar sizes that hold the amount you'd serve at a single meal. Unused portions may be safely refrigerated, but once a jar is opened, food quality deteriorates County Agent's Notes

By Lee Taylor

Summer is now upon us and while the rain put a damper on beach activities it really has helped the pasture situation. Nearly all permanent summer grazing is doing real well this year. I have seen some real fine Bahia grass and Alicia bermuda grass fields. Cattle are in generally good to excellent condition. Prices remain good levels and should remain fairly high until this fall. The first of July is a good time to remove the bull from the cow herd if you are on a spring calving season. Bulls are also bringing good prices at the stockyards. So if it is time to change bulls, now would be the time to identify replacement heifers. They should be eventually separated from the main cow herd and cared for in a different manner. Heifers should be continually growing and should not be bred until they weigh 600-700 pounds. They should ideally calf as a two year old.

Insects and parasites are continuing to be a problem. If you have not wormed your cattle you need to do so now. There are several good wormers on the market and one or two will also give you fly and lice control for up to 30 days. Horn flys are bad this year and cattle should be treated to minimize this problem. Sprays, back rubbers, dusts, and pour-ons give good control. If not controlled these blood sucking insects can rob you of your profits. Control Ticks

With such a mild winter behind us, we are going to have a heavy population of ticks to contend with this summer. Please note the American dog tick is a carrier of Rocky Mountain Spring Fever, so protect yourself and your pet.

You can control ticks inside your house with diazinon, dursban or dichlorvs. Around the house and outside houses use sevin, malathion or methoxychlor.

Deep water fishing

Deep water bassin' tactics involve structure, whether it's summer or winter. Roland Martin, in his book 101 Bass Catchin' Secrets, states that fishing deep structure involves "a series of patterns for 5-to-50-foot structures primarily on main-lake areas not often fished by the average angler. Also involved are schools and concentrations of bass."

Martin goes on to emphasize, "I've always believed the best way to win a tournament is to find five good patterns with at least one of them being a deep-structure pattern with a school of bass."

For the real bass enthusiast, deep water or structure fishing offers some real distinct advantages: First, you're in water where the average Joe isn't even going to attempt to fish and, second, your chances of limiting out on excellent bass is increased when you're fishing over a school. But there are seasonal rules of thumb you must recognizé.

"If it's wintertime," stakes Ken Cook, Evinrude Outboards Pro Team members, "you're talking about fairly vertical structure. Look at the lake that you're trying to fish and pick out the most vertical types of structure in the lake, i.e., a bluff, a real steep point. Those are the types of places that you're going to find bass in the wintertime. Bass tend to be located around channel edges and on the inside of concave structure, like a channel drop-off.

"In the summertime," Cook continues, "the fish will generally be more associated with convex structure. In the summersime, I find that more often than not, those same bass will tend to locate themselves on convex structure like humps and ridges in the middle of the lake and places that stick up from the bottom, that are shallower than the surroundings."

When you get into deep water bassin', you need a lure that will get down from 10-feet in Florida to 60 feet at Table Rock in Missouri. But for the most part, "deep water" will generally be from 20 to 30 feet of water. There are few lures that will fish that deep, so you're limited to a very small selection of balts. And, the balt has to sink fast.

"The two that I fish more than anything else is a jigging spoon, like a 3/4-ounce structure spoon (it's a a ligging spoun, it's not necessary to piece of stainless steel with a hook on it), which has a fluttering motion when it sinks and it imitates a bait fish that when crippled sinks," instructs Cook.

"It's one of the best baits you can use, especially in the wintertime. In the summertime, I use a deep heavy plastic worm to get to that depth of water and invariably with a slip sinker, which is the way I get it down there.

Cook also offers a tip for the type of line you should be using when bassin' in the depths:

"A lot of times when you're fishing deep water, it's clear water. So you need to use light line-in the summertime especially. When I'm fishing a worm, I tend to use real light line (six or eight pound test) to fish 25 feet deep. It allows the lure, plastic worm. Johnnie or grub to sink faster and have a better action at that depth. That's one of the keys to fishing deep water. If you're using use light line because you're fishing vertically and bringing the spoon up and down over the top of the bass and structure."

Fishermen running a lot of electronic equipment on their bass boatmight consider installing a voltmeter gauge, advise experts at OMC Service. One of the easiest instruments for the do-it-yourselfer toinstall, a volmeter monitors battery voltage, the operation of the alternator on the motor and the function of the voltage regulator.

OMC's flush-mount voltmeter has a suggested retail price of about $30 at most Johnson and Evinrude outboard dealers.

There has been a lot of hoopla in the last month centered around the question "Why aren't there any black managers in baseball?" Well the answer may not be a simple one. I think it's less a case of racial discrimination, than it is a problem of dollars and sense for both blacks and whites.

Finances is one of the reasons why there aren't more blacks at the helm in the majors. Not many blacks remain in baseball after their playing days. Why? Ex-players are drawn toward the big money that outside firms are paying. In order to stay in baseball, a player would have to take a pay cut. With the egos and the lifestyles they've enjoyed as players, how can one expect them to opt for years of minor league coaching and alim paychecks to pursue a managerial position? That brings me to the second reason. It really does take a long time to become a manager in the majors. Cal Ripken Sr., manager of the Baltimore Orioles was a member of that organization for 20-plus years before he stepped into the manager's role this year. Frank Robinson was a manager/player for the Cleveland Indians in the late 70s, but his case was an exception. Most managers have worked their way through the minor leagues before taking charge of the big league club. Besides, it seems to me that blacks are not the only group that should be complaining about not having a shot in the majors. After all ... the Japanese haven't ever had a player, manager, or ballboy in the

Talladega museum gets Saab record car

TALLADEGA, Ala. - The International Motorsports Hall of Fame and Museum recently added a new car to Its collection when Saab donated on of its 9000 Turbos which took part in last year's "Long Run" endurance test at the Alabama International Motor Speedway.

The test, which ran from last October 7 to October 27, saw three SAAB 9000 Turbos set 21 Interanational and 2 World records for speed and distance traveled. The cars stopped only for driver changes, gas, tires, oil and some permitted minor repairs.

Presenting the car to Jerry Corvin, Hall of Fame Director, on behalf of Saab-Scania AB of Sweden and Saab-Scania of America were Robert J. Sinclair, Saab-Scania of America President and Olle Granlund, of Saab-Scania AB.

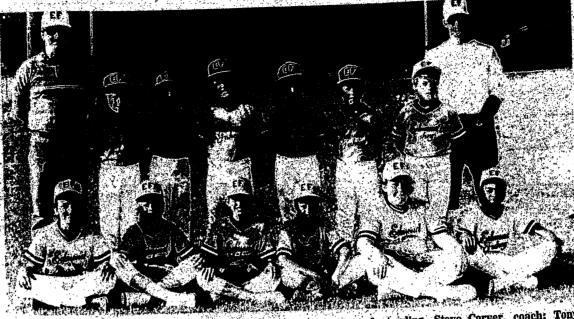

Granlund, Chief of Saab's engine and transmission division, developed the "Long Run" en-durance test to demonstrate the durability of Saab's turbocharged 16-valve, four-cyclinder engines.

Granlund also drove in the en-durance test, which set an average speed of 132.5 mph.

Presentation of the car to the Museum was witnessed by a crowd of 135,000 during the "Winston 500" pre-race activities. Other than the famous British car, the "Bluebird", Saab becomes the only other foreign-manufactured world-record setting car enshrined in the "Transfer of the Saab to the Museum was a special event for me," said the Museum director Jerry Corvin, I watched the "Long Run Project" unfold from the very beginning to its successful conclusion. It was also special to me because the day of the donation also happened to be my birthday.

Saab was joined in the "Long Run" by Pirelli, which supplied high-performance tires; the Garrett Corporation, makers of the turbocharger on the Saab 9000 engine; and Shell, whose crews provided gasoline, oil and other lubricants.

The basis for the new system's predicted fuel savings is the use of methane in the form of liquefied natural gas (LNG).

According to Dr. C. Everett Brett, project leader at the University of Alabama, LNG is about half the price of diesel, domestic supplies are abundant and prices aren't tied to international politics.

Brett sees the use of methane as one answer for shrimpers caught between high operating costs and competition from shrimp imported from foreign mariculture opera-

The new methane-diesel system includes a methane carburetor on a diesel engine, cryogenic (supercold) tanks to store LNG at -269 degrees Farenheit, a cryogenic fuel line system, a refrigeration system that uses liquefied methane's potential for absorbing heat, and a heat exchanger to ensure that the gaseous methane enters the engine at a constant temperature.

In the cylinder, a small pilot charge of diesel initiates combustion. The generator that provides

Chain to serve on Economic Development

Bobby L. Chain, former Hattiesburg mayor and past president of the Mississippi Board of Trustees for the Institutions of Higher Learning, will represent the Pearl River College six county district on the Advisory Council to the Economic Development Foundation.

Chain, owner of an electronic engineering firm, was appointed by PRC President Dr. Ted J. Alexander with confirmation by the Pearl River Board of Trustees.

Board of Trustees at each of Mississippi's 15 junior colleges will name one representative to the State Advisory Council for Economic Development. The Hinds Junior College board selected former Governor William Winter as its representative. Winter is from Jackson.

The council will help the Mississippi Junior College Association administer a plan to upgrade economic development through creation of resource centers at each junior college campus.

Pearl River's main campus is in Poplarville, however, the pioneer junior college operates centers in Hattiesburg, Purvis and Bay St. Louis.

The centers will provide industrial training and services to new industries and small businesses and technical assistance to secondary centers and programs. Pearl River College already has a very active Industry Services Division. Chain is one of the most visible and active civic and community leaders in south Mississippi. He was recently appointed to a 15 member national advisory council on adult education by President Ronald Regan.

Chain is also a member of the Council for the support of Public Higher Education in Mississippi "The junior colleges in Mississippi make up a very critical and vital component or our system of higher education," Chain said in accepting the junior college appointment.

The former Hattiesburg mayor said was well aware that 60 percent of the freshmen and sophomores in the state receive their first two years of higher education in the junior college system. The Mississippi Junior College Economic Development foundation with a joint meeting of the State Advisory Council will meet Wednesday, January 28 in Jackson.

Federal cutbacks will curtail student aid.

dent financial aid at the University of Southern Mississippi by at least $2 million next school year, cutting out entirely or partially reducing benefits for an estimated 1,500 to 2,000 students.

USM financial aid director Bill Bron said changes required by the 1986 Higher Education Act would cut student financial aid "roughly between $2 million and $2.5 million" for the 1987-88 school year.

"The Financial Aid Office has been accused of crying wolf for years," he added." "Well, now the wolf is here. He has made his changes and they are going to be Fron predicted the federal changes will cut out financial aid entirely for approximately 1,000 USM students and probably will reduce aid for another 500 to 1,000.

"What effect these changes will have on enrollment remains to be seen," he said. "The USM Aid Office will try to keep everyone abreast of further changes as they occur."

Fron and his assistant director, Grady Collins, noted March 15 is the deadline for students to file financial aid applications for the 1987-88 school year, if they want to receive priority consideration for a variety of scholarships and other available assistance. Late applications will be accepted and processed on a fundsavailable basis.

Students and their families will have to file the ACT Family Financial Statements, which must be based on information contained in 1986 income tax forms. Students usually are advised about their eligibility for financial aid in late May and early

Fron pointed out his office helped channel more than $20 million in financial aid to some 7,500 USM students last school year, noting that was more "than any other school in

LIMAT'S POUR

He said, however, the new federal law would bring about a number of changes affecting student eligibility for such assistance as Pell Grants. National Direct Student Loans Guaranteed Student Loans, Sup. plemental Educational Opportunity Grants and State Student Incentive Grants.

Fron noted some changes in the federal law would raise maximum loan and grant amounts that could be received by eligible students; But he cautioned that was misleading, because the eligibility requirements for those same loans and grants were being toughened.

"While loan limits have increased, no longer will family incomes below $30,000 be automatically eligible for student loans from banks," he said. "Students will have to qualify solely on the basis of financial need. You could see families with incomes under $20,000 no longer eligible."

Under old guidelines, a student or dependent student's family earning less than $30,000 a year automatically was eligible for the Guaranteed Student Loan program. Eligibility now, however, will be based on proven financial need, which considers assets and other factors in addition to the family's income.

Fron also said the definition of "independent student" has changed under the new law and students will have to maintain a "C" average after their second year in school.

"We are going to see disgruntled students who are going to find out that they may need parental data to apply for aid," the director predicted.

He said all financial aid recipients would be required to go through a needs test, using the same criteria as presently used for the NDSL program, SEO grants and the College Work-Study programs.

A proposal that Congress will consider early this year is that of setting up a separate class of consumer banks. These banks would offer only consumer lending and deposit taking services and they would be required to make available as local loans at least 65 percent of the deposits generated within that state. Society offers free camp for child cancer victims

The Mississippi Division of the American Cancer Society is conducting a special free summer camp for children, ages 6-19, who have, or have had cancer.

Camp Rainbow, located in a wooded site near the Strong River in Pinola, Miss., offers children the opportunity to be accepted by their peer group and find new role models to assist them in gaining a new perspective on themselves and their illnesses.

The camp also allows the family a rest knowing that their children are in capable hands. The staff includes an on-site medical team of qualified pediatric, oncology physicians and nurses on a 24-hour a-day basis.

The camp session is scheduled for Aug, 21-23. There are no charges to eligible children, and transportation will be provided. Deadline for registration is June 30.

The three-day weekend camp offers swimming, tennis, horseback riding, arts and crafts, sports programs and more. Specialized activities are planned for the various age groups

For further information and registration, contact Sandra Connaway, Mississippi Division area director, at 896-7024. Collect calls will be accepted.

Architect Fred Wagner, after a review of the work of the board's Building Committee, presented the proposed house plans for the president's home. The Building Committee, which was organized in June of 1986, the last month of former President Marvin R. White's tenure, has been working the last year in researching and assessing the needs of the college and the type facility needed.

The committee recommended to the board that the new house serve the dual functions of a livable, working home for the president and his family and also include appropriate space for public functions.

Wagner reported that in order for the house to do the job that the committee envisions, the proposed home would be functional without being pretentious.

PRC's present home was built in 1924 and is the oldest such junior college residence in Mississippi. It cost $4,700 to build in 1924 and another $15,000 was spent on renovation when Dr. White became president 20 vears ago.

Wagner also reported to the board that the cost will probably exceed the $150,000 figure estimated by the board for construction.

Business manager Ron Holmes reported that the college has the finances available for the construction project and that the funds can only be used for construction pro-

Beginning Jan. 1, PRC will have the only junior and community college barber program located in 29 counties in South Mississippi, pending approval of the State Board for Community and Junior Colleges and the Bureau of Vocational-Technical Education. There are only three public programs in the state and

Dr. Sones said the new program has the endorsement of the Executive Secretary of the State Barber Board, the Gulf Coast Business Services Corp., and the South Mississippi Planning and Development District and will serve the PRC district, as well as other counties in South Mississippi.

Freshman orientation elevated to course offering status at USM

HATTIESBURG— The University of Southern Mississippi next fall will become the first university in the state to offer a course aimed at helping new students adjust to college

"We're modeling USM 101 after a University of South Carolina Program, which was originated in 1973 and this is the first course of its type in Mississippi," explained USM Career Development Center Director Charlotte Tullos, adding, "I believe this is really the key to helping students start a successful college career." USM 101 is designed to meet the special needs of freshmen with class sessions on time management, study skills, writing skills, test-taking tips, money management and stress management. USM 101, a two-hour credit course, will provide students with an explanation of univesity policies and procedures.

The class/will visit different parts of campus and will be introduced to university resources through guest speakers and other appearances. The course also will include a library orientation session to aid new students in locating books, periodicals and other reference materials.

In addition, USM 101 is intended to promote responsible decisionmaking about career planning, personal growth and social issues.

USM will offer 10 small course sections of 20 students each for the fall semester. Eventually, the course will be adapted to meet the needs of
